Dear Chairman Bernanke, Chairman Bair, Director Reich, and Comptroller Dugan:

The American Bankers Association (ABA)¹ appreciates the efforts of the Agencies to adopt a capital framework that better matches capital to the risks in a given bank. The ABA supports these efforts and remains committed to working with the Agencies in the development of such a framework.

Towards that end, the ABA respectfully requests that the Agencies include the standardized approach as outlined by the Basel Committee as an option in the forthcoming Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPR) implementing Basel II. Since the release of the draft NPR by the Federal Reserve Board in March 2006, several of the banks that will be required to comply with the advanced internal ratings-based (advanced IRB) approach have expressed concerns about the course of capital adequacy reform being pursued by the Agencies. Many of these banks view Basel II as evolving into a compliance exercise that may yield little, if any, opportunity for banks to realize the benefits from a more risk-efficient employment of capital.

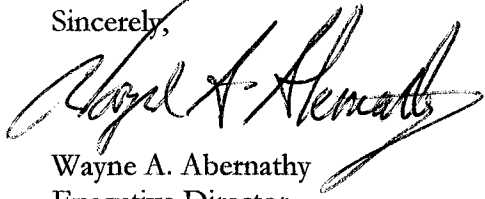

We propose for your consideration that the concerns about the advanced IRB approach could be addressed effectively through alternatives, including the standardized approach. We believe the Basel II NPR provides an excellent opportunity to explore the merits of the standardized approach, and thus we support recent requests from banks asking that the agencies permit U.S. banking organizations of all sizes the option of adopting alternative methodologies.

We appreciate your consideration of our views.

Sincerely,
